1. The Polish Bank of Buenos Aires, a branch of the Polish banking organization known as the P.K.O., is [REDACTED] to have achieved virtually a monopoly on all transactions between Poland and Argentina after a recent reorganization. The reorganization and expansion of the branch was accomplished under the supervision of General Henryk Gertner, vice-president of the central office of the P.K.O., who was in Buenos Aires from 11 October 1946 to 12 February 1947.

25X1X 3. [REDACTED] the favored position in Polish trade transactions was achieved by the Polish Bank in spite of opposition from Stanislaw Breiter, head of the Polish Commercial Mission, and Stanislaw Kowalowski, leader of the Communist element in the Polish community of Argentina and one of the founders of the Slav Union (Union Eslava), formerly known as the Slav Committee (Comite Eslavo).
